The Annie Workshop

By Abby Haraway

Do you want to do drama for a living? Then check out the Annie workshop. In the past few and upcoming weeks, the Annie Jr - 4 Week Summer Children's Workshop has been looking for talented children. It is a drama workshop for kids wanting to pursue an acting career. If you are interested, then don't hesitate to join! When you enter and have a sibling wanting to do it with you, they get an extra $100 discount. It is for ages 7-17 and takes place at New Brighton Middle School Performing Arts Center.

The 8th Grade Dance is on May 19th, from 6:00 - 8:00 PM. Dance permission slips will be handed out during flex sometime in May. Tickets will be $10. There will be a DJ and lots of snacks and cookies. Also, if you want to take pictures with your friends, there will be a photo booth with fun accessories to wear.

Interview with Mr Werdmuller

By Trent Hadreas

I interviewed Mr Werdmuller today, and these are the things he responded with. Mr Werdmuller chose to work at New Brighton because he grew up in Soquel and loved it so much that he wanted to help the community. Also, he's been working at New Brighton for about 13 years and is a big part of the teacher department. What makes Mr Wermuller's teaching style unique is he makes Room 35 fun. For example, on Christmas, we all brought presents for White Elephant. Some of the biggest challenges he faces as a teacher is time. He doesn't have enough time to relax at home because he has been working so much in New Brighton. Something that inspired him to become a teacher is he loved to coach Middle School and High School sports, so he decided it was a good idea to become a teacher. The most rewarding experience he has had as a teacher is watching the students graduate. The most memorable moment he had teaching was throwing up on a student that talked a lot at Cupertino in his first year of teaching. He wishes more people knew about being a teacher because it is very rewarding to have fun and energetic students around you every day.

Bank Robbery!

By Emilio Carrillo and Charlie Lowe

On April 12, 2023, at 11:15 a.m., an armoured security guard and his truck were held at gunpoint. Apparently, “the individual had taken “an undisclosed amount of money” and fled. No one was injured.” The suspect appeared to look like a 30-year-old white or Hispanic man, approximately 5 feet, 8 inches tall with short brown hair. He was wearing a dark baseball cap, a white face mask, and left with an undisclosed amount of money. This robbery took place outside of Bay Federal Credit Union’s Capitola branch on Clares Street.

Anyone with information related to the ongoing investigation is encouraged to contact the Capitola Police Department at 831-471-1141.”
